Fact Check-No evidence of pandemic 'mass formation psychosis', say experts speaking to Reuters

Applies to Gang stalking.....

"Mass Delusion/Paranoia/Psychosis Does Not Exist!

No official mental health journal/reference/textbook exists!

The phrase does not appear in the American Psychological Association (APA) Dictionary of Psychology (dictionary.apa.org/), (dictionary.apa.org/browse/m) nor does it appear in the PsycNet database of published research articles (here), (here).

Numerous psychologists have also told Reuters that such a condition is not officially recognized.

"I have never heard of this concept," John Drury, Professor of Social Psychology and Director of Research and Knowledge Exchange at the University of Sussex, wrote in an email to Reuters.

Jay Van Bavel, Associate Professor of Psychology and Neural Science at New York University, said the term "doesn't exist as a real academic concept", adding: "I've been studying group identity and collective behaviour for nearly two decades and just published a book on the topic (www.powerofus.culme/) and not once have I come across this term.

"It seems to have been made up recently. There are similar-sounding concepts, like 'mass psychogenic illness,' (here) but the scope of these is relatively narrow compared to what is being proposed here."

"It has been totally discredited by contemporary work on groups and crowds."

Van Bavel, who said he found the idea of mass formation psychosis "reductionist", highlighted a different account of the role of psychology, groups and leadership in the rise of Naziism (here).

Naziism?

He added: “But telling people who disagree with you that they are deluded and in a state of psychosis is essentially a device to silence them and a form of disrespect. It alienates and hence undermines an attempt at dialogue. It isn’t an explanation of the problem; it is part of the problem.”
